Before the American Embassy will issue a student visa to study at Loyola University New Orleans, the prospective student must show evidence that he/she has access to a minimum of $37,453 per year while in the United States. This is the minimum cost of living and studying for a single international student at Loyola University for nine months. Costs for married students who bring families will be higher.

The individual signing the Affidavit of Support (see reverse side) is agreeing to provide the minimum amount per year for the student. An official from the bank where the funds are located must certify the sponsor’s signature. If the signature is not certified, this form will not be accepted. No final decision on admission will be made until this document is received.
